Anyway, What about your story?

by Bryony Parsons

Anyway, what about your story? It was a sunny day, and as you know, sun is rare in the uk. There was a beach. It had pebbles. There were lots of seagulls around. We decided to take a walk along the peir. We bought a bag of donuts. It was the donuts with the sugar on top. They were lovely and warm. We decided to go and sit on the beach.

We found the perfect spot. I offered my mum the donut bag. We started to share the donuts. It wasn't until a seagull landed right in front of us, that we decided to close up the bag. We chose this moment to move on from where we were sitting and continued to walk along the seafront.

One by one, the seagulls started to fly around us. We dropped the donut bag and ran as fast as our legs could carry us. We came to a stop and turned around. The seagulls were demolishing that bag of donuts.

As I watched them steal my yummy treats, I remember thinking 'You lucky birds.' It was a lesson I had learned the hard way. Seagulls scare me. They always have done, as they could be blooming vicious when it comes to food. Never again, will I be eating on the beach.
